Jaw Shattered, Eye Filled with Brass When Boat Was Hit

RENEWS CHARGES OF BRITISH CRUELTY

Declares Patrol Boat Flew American Flag During Engagement

Berlin, Jan. 13 (by wireless to Sayville). The official report of Lieutenant Crompton, a survivor of the German submarine U-41, sunk by the British on September 24, 1915, the case of which the German government has characterized as a second Baralong incident, was made public today and is published in the newspapers.

Lieutenant Crompton, after being wounded and a prisoner in England, was interned in Switzerland, whence his report was received. Previous statements by the German Admiralty have charged that the account he gave of the circumstances of the sinking and the after treatment of the two survivors showed a deliberate attempt to do away with the only eye-witnesses on the U-41 is alleged to have been carried out by a British patrol ship which flew the American flag throughout the engagement.

Tells of Attack

Lieutenant Crompton's report reads, in part, as follows: "When the vessel was about 300 metres apart the submarine suddenly opened a violent fire, first with shells along the whole railing, then from 7.5 calibre machine guns hidden behind the ship's side at the bow and stern. "The submarine had received several hits by shells shortly before the conning tower was submerged and the submarine went to the bottom. I was lying unconscious in the lower in consequence of a wound. When I returned to consciousness I was swimming. Neither the submarine nor the steamer was visible. After having swam for some time I was passed by the steamer at a distance of about sixty metres. I called and raised my arms, but was sneered and spit at by sailors. After a long time I saw an empty life-boat of the steamer Urbino. When I had climbed into it I heard the helmsman calling for me and took him in. "After some time we saw the steamer again. We stood upright in the boat and waved our hands. The steamer changed her course and approached us at high speed. She was observed by me in the bow who directed the course of the boat and menaced us with his list from time to time. As the steamer did not reduce her speed there was no doubt that she intended to ram us. Finally they threw a rope and took us on board.

Placed in Hospital

"On September 26 I was taken on land and conveyed to a military hospital, being first lodged in a room with four British officers. The next day, by order of the captain of the port, I was lodged in barracks. "He was then confined in the military barracks at Devonport, describing his experience thus: "After repeated requests, I obtained a bed. The rations were those of convicts, and I could not eat them in consequence of my broken jaw. The medical assistance was absolutely insufficient. As I was in danger of becoming blind in the right eye, also, I was taken on October 11 to the military hospital at Devonport. The broken jaw was treated again and a foreign substance detected. On October 18 I was operated upon and a brass screw which had been driven in by a shell explosion was removed. At the place where the jaw was broken from within and without serious abscesses had formed meanwhile. Several brass splinters were shortly afterward removed from my left eye, the last one in January, 1916. The treatment was generally good, but frequently the attendants stole food.

GERMAN RAIDER SUNK. BRITISH CREW REPORTS

Wireless Picked Up by Mackinaw Gives Details of Cruiser's Victim

(By Telegraph to The Tribune.) Boston, Jan. 13.—The first definite information brought to Boston of the sinking of a German raider in the Atlantic by a British cruiser was given by the officers and crew of the British steamship Mackinaw, which arrived here today from London. They told of picking up wireless messages between British warships on December 31 last, when the Mackinaw was in mid-ocean. These messages were congratulatory, and told of the sinking of a German raider that day by a British cruiser. The radiograms mentioned time, latitude and longitude. They also mentioned the raider as a "converted prize." The Mackinaw did not know whether the sunken raider was the long overdue liner Voltaire.

BRITISH PIERCE GERMAN LINES NEAR THE ANCRE

His Men Take and Hold Advanced Trenches—Berlin Admits Loss

London, Jan. 13.—Continuing their fierce attacks north of the Ancre, the British broke through the German advanced positions near Serre today and held to their new line. Berlin announces that the British delivered several attacks, but that "a greater part of them were sanguinously repulsed." The Germans still hold the main position near Serre, the statement adds. On the rest of the West front operations were confined to artillery bombardments and patrol actions.

ITALIAN AND AUSTRIAN FLIERS IN DARING RAIDS

Prosecco and Trieste Are Bombed—Airdrome Near Belghena Shelled

London, Jan. 13.—Austrian and Italian aerial forces have been extremely active in the last few days. Thursday Italian seaplanes bombarded Prosecco and the fortifications of Trieste, damaging the enemy's works and returning safely in the face of a violent fire from the hostile batteries. The Italian airdrome near Belghena, destroyed twice before in aerial attacks, was shelled yesterday by Austrian seaplanes, which scored several hits. Of two Austrian machines that attempted an attack against Grado Cervignano, only one returned, the other being shot down.

RECALL LAWSON; TO FORCE REPLIES

House Gives Leak Committee Broader Powers for Use To-morrow

WILL BE ORDERED TO REVEAL NAMES

Baruch and Other New York Financiers Also To Be Put on Stand

Washington, Jan. 13.—Members of the House Rules Committee, armed with the broadest authority to compel witnesses—and particularly Thomas W. Lawson—to answer questions, will resume Monday their investigation of rumors that advance information reached Wall Street on President Wilson's peace note.

The committee has subpoenaed all persons and papers that it considers might shed light on the rumors. Besides Lawson, Bernard Baruch, of New York, and several other New York and Chicago brokers have been asked to testify Monday. All of the telegrams sent from Washington on December 29, the day stock market speculators are reported to have profited by advance information, also have been asked for. Interest in the recalling of Lawson to the stand overshadowed among members of Congress to-night all other developments in connection with reopening the hearing. Under a resolution adopted by the House to-day the committee is empowered to compel him to answer any question.

House Backs Committee

The resolution was drawn at an executive session of the committee, which endeavored to make it broad enough to cover every possible avenue of escape from contempt charges for any witness, and the House, in adopting the proposal as soon as it was presented, displayed a willingness to go as far as possible in strengthening the committee's hand. Lawson will be interrogated from a set of written questions now being prepared. He will be asked, among other things, to name the Congressman who told him a story about a Cabinet official, a banker and a Senator being involved in a profit-making conspiracy in connection with the leak, and also to name the trio themselves. If the Boston financier fails to answer the plan is to cite him for contempt and give him an opportunity to make answer before the bar of the House. Then, if he stands over to the sergeant-at-arms, and the House may order him held until he decides to answer, or it may refer the cause to the courts.

May Escape Punishment

Officials expect the contempt proceedings will be necessary, for they do not believe that Lawson will answer the committee's questions. If the case is handled solely by the House, however, and no direct appeal taken to the courts, many officials think it doubtful if he ever will be punished. The authority of the present Congress to punish recalcitrant witnesses expires March 4, and it is pointed out that the contempt proceedings brought against District Attorney Marshall, of New York, several months ago still are held up and Marshall remains unpunished. Should Lawson be turned over to the District of Columbia courts, however, as some members of Congress advocate, punishment might be easier.

U. S. DIPLOMATIC AID QUILTS

Lorillard, Alleged Critic of Wilson's Note, Leaves Romanian Post

Washington, Jan. 13.—George L. Lorillard, secretary of the American Legation to Rumania and assigned by the State Department as confidential agent of the United States with the Serbian government by request of the Central Powers to care for their interests there, especially among prisoners, has resigned. Official announcement of the resignation and its acceptance was made today at the State Department.

He recently requested a transfer, which was refused by the State Department, and resulted in his resignation. Unofficial reports to-day said that Mr. Lorillard spoke in derogatory terms of President Wilson's peace note. This, however, was discredited at the State Department.

DOCTORS ASSAIL UNIVERSAL DRILL

Speakers Against Militarism Appear Before Senate Committee

Washington, Jan. 13.—Vigorous opposition to any form of universal military training was expressed before the Senate Military Committee to-day by several speakers for the American Union Against Militarism. Physicians and physical educators, headed by Dr. James Warhase, of New York, assailed particularly the suggestion that physical benefits would be derived from military training in the schools. They were followed by a delegation of college men under the leadership of Max Eastman, formerly of Columbia University. At the outset to-day representatives of the union made it clear that they were not opposed to building up an adequate army and navy, but would direct their arguments specifically against any proposal for universal training.

The group of physicians and educators contended that the sort of physical training required in a military course lacks elements of exercise essential to well rounded bodily development and that military drill in schools does not really teach boys the art of war, because they are too young to handle real weapons and undergo the rigors of adequate instruction.

Mr. Eastman declared that the psychology of military training is opposed to every educational theory of American democracy and that the enactment of compulsory military training legislation would be the greatest step backward the nation ever has taken. The sole purpose of military training, he said, was to train out of a man his individual initiative and to cultivate the instinct of submission. He argued that adequate payment would bring all the soldiers the country might need.

The present agitation for military training, Mr. Eastman said, is only the plea of aristocracy to sustain its position. He satirized the pleasure which he said the socially select derived from publication of the fact that Vincent Astor slept at Plattsburg in the same dog tent with his valet. Brent Allanson, of Harvard, declared that "conscription of people to kill without having any say as to whether we go to war is monstrous." He added that he "hated everything military," though he was a member of the Harvard Battalion.

Columbia men who went to Plattsburg, said Edward M. Early, of Columbia, returned filled with the idea that war was certain and were not open to discussion of the subject. Robert Dunn, editor of "The Yale Courant," took a similar view.
